since we are measuring expected cost of new capital, we should use the market values of the components, rather than their book values (which can be significantly different)